Midterm Site Proposal

Concept
This site is about introductory coffee brewing, containing information about brewing at home and recording my experiences with it. The first page will on the basics of coffee brewing, including the process and resources. Another page will display/list the various reviews about coffee beans from roasters I've tried, and any other experimentation when home brewing. A third page will detail the equipment I use. The intention is to be a basic quick-start guide to brewing at home.

Concepts that were covered:
Navigation bars, image properties and CSS, transformations/transitions, inline-block, positioning, gallery, CSS styling

Concepts needed:
A fun way to scroll through the reviews, such as a carousel or sliding element that enables both easy, interactive clicking/scrolling through multiple entries while maintaining readability. Also how to implement a transparent navigation bar aligned to bottom of full width banner image
